Introduction

I am an American person and a citizen of the World. Much has been made of how people in other countries hate and resent America, possibly more now than at any recent time. I've been advised to keep a low profile about my nationality when traveling and I even know some Americans who will tell foreigners that they are Canadian. But I never hesitate when asked to tell people where I come from, and I make the effort to say it in the local language. In hundreds of encounters I can say I've never gotten an unsavory or threatening response. It can be startling and even transformative to feel pure trust and hospitality from 'strangers'. From my experience in Asia I find that people like Americans for their informality and admire them for having built a nation that is everyone's model of modern-ness. I think that travelers are simply judged by their individual attitudes, consideration and behavior. Knowing this, no American should hesitate to get out there, mix with other peoples and immerse themselves in all the wonderful cultures of the world. I consider it one of the best activities to bring about World peace & understanding.

Biographical Information

Author-photographer Bob Mocarisky is currently living and playing piano in a jazz quintet in Shanghai China ~ originally from West Hartford CT, my Odyssey has taken me to Boston MA, Tallahassee FL, Boulder CO, San Francisco CA, and Bangkok Thailand

"Pianist, composer-arranger & keyboard instructor for all of this lifetime ~ I've pursued a career as Jazz Pianist, as well as Salsa, R&B, etc. My range of musical activities has been as diverse as being on the road with vocalist Bobby McFerrin to B3 church organist and so much more...

My lifetime interest in Asian/Chinese art, culture & philosophy has led me to live and play my music in Asia, the part of the world which continues to inspire me."
